MARKING HUMANITY

Stories, Poems, & Essays
by Holocaust Survivors

Edited by Shlomit Kriger

Imagine sitting across from a member of the German Secret State Police and negotiating with him to allow for the release of Jewish youngsters and for the establishment of a Jewish school. What can a teenager do when forced to march past the gallows and see how two of his campmates were hung? These are just some of the very real experiences that afflicted the 46 featured Holocaust survivors, who remained resilient and went on to rebuild their lives in the United States, Canada, Israel, Australia, England, and Germany. Including their bios and 70 writings, Marking Humanity provides a first-hand glimpse into their tribulations and reflections, while illuminating lessons from the survivors and Holocaust and emphasizing their relevancy today. Readers are encouraged to consider how every person helps to shape the world and the collective shifts that can be created so future generations discover the true meaning of "Never Again."

Celebrate the indomitable spirits of Holocaust survivors, who serve as an example for others still struggling to be heard and to reach the waves of love, peace, and healing.

"Even though the survivors' offerings are diverse and their experiences are different, they seemingly speak with one voice, of one experience."

— From the Foreword by Michael Berenbaum, Director of the Sigi Ziering Institute: Exploring the Ethical and Religious Implications of the Holocaust

"History happens one heartbreak and one triumph at a time, and this book helps us see and feel it through these personal writings."

— Amy Sky, singer/songwriter

"A must read for a world once again on the cusp of descending into a new abyss of intolerance and ancient hatreds."

— Ian Leventhal, Executive Director for the Toronto office of the Jerusalem Foundation of Canada
